NJEA

affiliates exist in every New Jersey school district and represent the district's employees in all but a handful. About 98 percent of all New Jersey elementary and secondary teachers are NJEA members.

NJEA produces the largest and most frequently published professional journal of any education association.

NJEA Convention is the largest, most comprehensive offering of professional development workshops and seminars anywhere in the world.

NJEA offers new teachers – including students still earning their degrees and teaching licenses – support, training, and counseling to give every member the best chance to help children learn.

NJEA is one of the most effective political and lobbying organizations in New Jersey. As long as decisions about education and school funding depend on the political process, you need effective representation in the State House in Trenton.

NJEA is an affiliate of the National Education Association, and that extends education's representation to the federal government in Washington, DC. NEA membership makes you part of almost 3.2 million educators nationwide.
